

NEW TESTAMENT THEOLOGY

Fr. Gilbert MUNANA, OP

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course aims to introduce to the major issues raised by the nature of what is called "New Testament Theology". After learning about the history and methodology of this type of theology and its situation in relation to Biblical Theology, the student will be able to identify the major theological themes of the New Testament, book by book, corpus by corpus, before judging whether a synthesis is possible for the entire New Testament. He will be able to ask himself whether there are really transversal theologies, and if so, to give examples of them (the kingdom of God according to the synoptic Gospels, the Christology of the Gospels, the theology of Luke and Acts, Johannine theology, Pauline theology, that of the Epistle to the Hebrews, general epistles, and finally). The first two chapters will serve to define the biblical theology of the New Testament, and to situate this approach in relation to other approaches (exegesis, systematic theology).

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the course, the student should be able to accomplish the following:

- Give the different definitions of Biblical Theology and the difficulties they raise (approaches, relationships with other theologies, etc.).
- Understand the issues of continuity/discontinuity between the two Testaments
- Explain briefly the state of research in New Testament theology.
- Situating the NT in the development of salvation history
- To have the main theological axes of each NT Book and to develop the main lines of the essential doctrines of the NT
- Linking NT biblical theology to other theological disciplines
